Akami: How was your interview, Alek?

Alek: I'm afraid it didn't go that well, Akami.

Akami:

Alek: That's the problem. I'm 25, and I hadn't been to a job interview before. I was so nervous that I struggled to answer the questions. The interviewer told me at least ten times to calm down before the end of the interview.

Akami:

Alek: Oh, is that it? Don't worry, interviewers are used to it. They know people are nervous because they try to be the best candidate and get the job.

Alek: It was so embarrassing.

Akami:

Alek: What had the interviewer asked you?

Akami:

Alek: He asked about my studies, my grades, my tech skills, and some software they need employees to use at work.

Akami:

Alek: And how do you feel about your answers?

Akami:

Alek: I feel that I'm a good candidate. I'd gotten excellent grades at the university, and I'm pretty good with computers.

Akami:

Alek: As you can see, there is nothing to be worried about.
